Jack Hays, and life as a pioneer on what was then the farthest frontier of Texas." Rader 1682. $275.00

15. BAXLEY, H. W. What I Saw on the West Coast of South and North America, and at the Hawaiian Islands. New York: Appleton, 1865. 632 pp., engraved plates, illustrations. 8vo, original cloth. Neatly rebacked, original spine preserved. Light marginal browning to text, overall very good, largely unopened.

First edition. Cowan, p. 38. Hill, p. 18: "Baxley, as special commissioner of the U.S., led this voyage of inspection. This is the account of his visits on a mission to reform hospital work under consular supervision which lasted 18 months. His route was via Panama to Peru, Chile, and Ecuador, then along the west coast to San Francisco. The visits to California and Hawaii were extensive." $300.00

16. BEECHEY, F. W. Narrative of a Voyage to the Pacific and Beering's Strait...1825-28... London: Colburn & Bentley, 1831. xxi [3] 392 + vii [i] [393]-742 pp., 19 engraved plates (including Californians throwing the lasso), 4 lithographs, 3 maps (2 folding), text illustrations. 2 vols., 4to, later 19th century three-quarter navy blue morocco, spine with black morocco gilt labels, raised bands, a.e.g. One plate with marginal restoration and lacking vol. 1 halftitle, else very good, with errata; British Army & Navy Club copy with gilt naval motifs and a few of their small, unobtrusive ink stamps.

First edition, Admiralty issue, scarcest and best edition, large format, with better quality plates and scientific data omitted from the more common 8vo edition ("the 4to edition is much to be preferred" Lada-Mocarski 95). Cowan, p. 42. Ferguson 1418. Howes B309: "Interesting accounts of Monterey and San Francisco before the American conquest." O'Reilly & Reitman 849. Zamorano 80 4n: "Gives a description of San Francisco harbor and tells of the sad state of affairs of both mission and presidio...treatment of mission Indians...Monterey...American Fur Company." One of the most comprehensive British naval voyages to the Pacific since the days of Cook, Beechey was to rendezvous with Franklin, who was searching for the Northwest Passage; the two groups came within 150 miles of one another, almost completing the survey of the coastline. $2,000.00

17. BELL, A. H. A Daughter of Maryland was the Mother of Texas, Mrs. Jane Herbert (Wilkinson) Long. [Washington]

Dorothy Sloan Books – Bulletin 3 (7/87)

Privately printed [1936]. 142 pp. 8vo, original black cloth. Very fine, author's presentation copy. Uncommon.

Salt Lake City. V.p., ca. 1880. Oblong 8vo, original black boards. Images measure from 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 inches to 2 x 2 inches, each identified in ink below. Artistically assembled, possibly with view to publication as a guide or promotional. Very fine.

The photographs include aerial view of Denver, Pike's Peak, Church of San Miguel at Santa Fe, Pueblo of Taos, Old Church Taos, Cliff Dwellers' Ruins, Albuquerque, Yosemite, Glacier Point, Golden Gate Park, Salt Lake City, Royal Gorge, cowboy scenes in Colorado, etc. These photographs were probably taken during Jackson's 1881 trip through the Southwest, since the photograph of "Garfield Beach and Great Salt Lake" includes painter Thomas Moran, who accompanied Jackson on this trip. "William Henry Jackson, the greatest of all Western photographers...[with the] ability to capture the many scenes of sublime beauty in the West on his photographic plates and stereopticon slides, did more than anyone else to publicize the tourist's West...Jackson, like the avant-garde writers, the scientists, and even the local colorists of his time, was helping to usher in a new era of realism that would in part replace, and at the same time, as far as subject matter was concerned, parallel the romanticism of an earlier day" (Goetzmann, Exploration & Empire, p. 499-500). This album and the following two were obtained by Nolie Mumey from Jackson's son. $3,750.00

154. JACKSON, William Henry. Original album dating from 1874, containing about 100 sepia photographs of Indians, artistically arranged. Sizes vary. Fine.

Much of the album appears to record Jackson's visit to the Utes at Los Pinos Agency, Colorado. Jackson discusses this incident in Time Exposure (pp. 224-228), during which he was able to photograph the Utes for one day only. The next day he was "politely informed that there could be no pictures. The Ute medicine men had said, 'No bueno.' We argued and pleaded and cajoled, but to no purpose." Wonderful shots of Ouray and Peah, of whom Jackson says: "If Ouray was the most extraordinary Indian of my acquaintance, Peah was certainly the most photogenic." $4,000.00

Mexico in the 19th century" (Mathes, Mexico on Stone).
According to Miguel Cervantes, who is writing a scholarly work on México y sus alrededores, this image was the first Mexican lithograph made from a daguerreotype. The plate shows a group of Kickapoos in tribal dress and runaway slaves from Texas who were living with the tribe. The Kickapoo, a branch of the central Algonquin, in 1809 ceded to the U.S. their lands in Illinois and lived successively in Missouri, Kansas, East Texas, and Mexico. A fragment of their tribe today survives near the bridge at Piedras
Negras. $750.00

228. PAEZ, José de (attrib.) Original oil painting on canvas of the destruction of Mission San Saba in Texas, measuring approximately 7 x 10-1/2 feet. Mexico, ca. 1760. Very fine.

The subject of this beautiful, monumental painting is the destruction of Mission San Saba, based on eye-witness accounts and composed around a realistic landscape (William Goetzmann has pointed out that the painting is the first landscape painting of Texas). The San Saba massacre was one of the pivotal events of the Spanish Southwest era, affecting Spanish policy regarding missions, Indians, and expansion. The center of the painting is a panoramic view of the mission enclosure. At either side are the life-size figures of the two martyred priests. At the bottom is a rectangular panel enclosing the text of the depicted event. Central to the painting are some 300 separate figures painted in groups to illustrate the 18 different incidents which are the historic theme of the painting. Most of the figures are Indians in exotic paint and dress.

One of only a few surviving colonial paintings relating to Texas (the others being portraits of Father Margil). Unique within the tradition of historical painting of the U.S. from the colonial era, in that no original paintings of importance executed at the time of a major event or even shortly thereafter are extant. For example, both "Washington Crossing the Delaware" and "Washington at Valley Forge" are romanticized 19th century renditions of 18th century events. In the same vein, the monumental paintings that hang in the Texas State Capitol Building, Huddle's 1886 painting of the surrender of Santa Anna at San Jacinto and McArdle's 1880's painting of the battle at the Alamo, were both executed a half century after the events depicted and both present a romanticized view of Texas history from the traditional Anglo interpretation. Public display of the painting of San Saba, one of the great Southwestern icons, would help contribute to a better understanding of the rich heritage of Spanish culture in the present U.S. See illustration (pp. 74-5) of The Spanish West in the Time-Life series on the Old West. First edition, limited edition (#72 of 150 copies, signed by author). Not in Sabin, Howes, etc. Flake 6416. This unusual photographic book is illustrated with stereoviews, a form of book illustration rarely found (the author knew of only one other example, and that did not have the viewer incorporated in the volume). Although a late appearance of the stereoscopic view, the author considered the form well worth reviving, and, in a move calculated to cause apoplexy amongst bibliophiles, advocated removing the plates if one had any difficulty using viewer. If this advice was followed to any great extent, it could make a complete copy difficult to find. Among the views are Yellowstone, Yosemite, Mariposa Grove, Pike's Peak, Great Salt Lake Desert, etc. $1,250.00

255. [SAN ELIZARIO]. Collection of 11 documents dealing with San Elizario Mission and Presidio. V.p., 1733-1849. First document rough condition, remainder fine, preserved in half leather folding box.

Founded as Nuestra Señora del Pilar y Glorioso Señor San José near present day Juárez, the presidio and Franciscan mission were moved to the present site outside of El Paso and renamed San Elizario in 1772 (Handbook of Texas II, pp. 549-50). Unfortunately, many of the manuscript archives for New Mexico were destroyed through negligence (see chapter 2 in Beers' Spanish & Mexican Records of the American Southwest); consequently, manuscript documents relating to San Elizario are seldom offered on the market. The collection contains: 1 page legal document dealing with the Court of Santa Cruzada, ca. 1730, engraving, mounted on silk, of "Santa Librada, Virgen Matrir on verso; 1 page ALs, January 5, 1780, from Diego de Borica announcing that Croix is going on an inspection trip across the border; 1 page ALs, January 17, 1789, from Borica to commander at San Elizario re arrest of the Indian Juan Palomo and suggesting the Apaches be paid for helping in the matter; 1 page ALs, April 17, 1780, from Borica to commander re dispatches to Croix; 3 pp. ALs, July 27, 1787, Juan Gutiérrez to commander re bonus system and fraud; 1 page ALs, 1811--invitation to baptism of José María Thomas; 3 pp. letter, April 1, 1834, I. 261. SCHÖNER, J. Opera Mathematica... Nuremberg: Montanus & Neuber, 1551. 3 parts in one vol., title in red and black with woodcut ornaments, woodcut portrait of author, numerous large and small woodcuts and diagrams, including a full-page cut of Schöner's terrestrial globe, 11 diagrams of instruments with volvelles and threads. Folio, old calf. Fine copy of a masterpiece of 16th century German illustration.

Dorothy Sloan Books – Bulletin 3 (7/87)

First edition of the collected works of Schöner (1477-1547), one of the great geographer-mathematicians of his time. Adams S678. Borba de Moraes, p. 782n. HARRISSE, pp. 304-5. Houzeau & Lancaster 2388. Sabin 77805. Zinner 2033. Starting as a priest, bookbinder, and maker of globes, Schöner became professor of mathematics in the newly founded University of Nuremberg in 1526. He published the literary remains of Regiomontanus, and, according to Thorndike, he encouraged Copernicus to publish his magnum opus. He was the second to call the newly found fourth continent "America." This collection contains most of Schöner's important writings, which are difficult to find in separate editions, including: De Compositione Globi Terrestris; De usu Globi Terrestris; and Opusculum Geographicum (which sparked the Columbus vs. Vespucci controversy). Schoener deals with the discoveries of Columbus and Vespucci; mentions Florida, Brazil, Mexico, Darien, Urabia, and Cannibalia as parts of the New World; states that Mexico City is the only Chinese commercial city of Quinsay. $3,750.00 colored ink, and black and white), 3 folding maps. 3 vols. in 12 fascicles. 4to, original chromolithographed wrappers illustrating butterflies. Other than occasional light chipping to fragile wrappers, fine, edges uncut. Very rare in pictorial wrappers.

First edition. Bennett, American 19th Century Color Plate Books, p. 96. Bien, Meisel, and Sinclair were among the lithographers of this great undertaking. Plates include butterflies in all stages of development, anatomy, portraits of Abbot and other well-known naturalists, distribution maps, etc. Extensive text gives physical description, distribution, life history, habits, etc. Although the title indicates that the work covers the eastern U.S. and Canada, ranges indicated for most of the butterflies extend beyond that region, as far west as California and south into Latin America. $1,500.00
